VCP Program Frequently Asked Questions (FAQ)

How much will my VCP correct me when I'm talking?

There is not a standard answer for this. You certainly do not want him/her to do it so much that it causes you to lose focus or make it difficult to share, but it is good to be corrected at times so you can improve. YOU let him/her know how much you would like to be corrected!

Should both of us be talking?

Yes! This is intended to be two-way communication and you as a learner need to learn how to listen in order to work on your comprehension. When your VCP is talking, it also takes the pressure of you and lets you learn to enjoy the conversation.

Do I need to prepare anything ahead of time?

Technically, no. However, before you end your session it is best if you can tell your VCP what topic you have chosen for the following week.

How do I communicate with my VCP?

Both of you will have Gmail accounts. Unless your VCP invites you to communicate another way, please communicate through this email address.

May I ask my VCP for help with another assignment?

While most would be more than happy to check your grammar, etc. on something short, please be sure it doesn't take too much time away from your session.

What topic will we discuss during the very first session?

Your language helper will guide you in a session that encourages each of you to tell your "life stories." This should be a great foundation for sessions to follow!
